NFIB Endorsed Candidates

Separate from the dues dollars required for NFIB membership, the NFIB Ohio PAC raises funds for use in political campaigns to support pro-small business candidates.

These dollars are spent supporting candidates who have been through a lengthy member-driven process that thoroughly reviews candidates' voting records where applicable, their stated positions, and their understanding of small-business issues before issuing an endorsement.

Additionally, all candidates seeking the endorsement of the NFIB Ohio PAC must complete a questionnaire related to their stances on small-business issues and those non-incumbent candidates without a voting record personally participate in an interview process with your fellow dues-paying members of the NFIB Ohio PAC committee before our endorsement for election is made.

As we advocate in the Ohio Legislature on behalf of our 22,000 members, it is important to have elected officials who not only understand the unique concerns of small-business owners but will also take the time to listen to those concerns. Elections matter to our members, and that is why we get so heavily involved in them, and why our process is so detailed and member-driven.

NFIB is supporting these candidates in Ohio listed in our guide so they can provide the leadership to the Ohio Senate, Ohio House of Representatives, Ohio Supreme Court, and US Congress that is necessary to keep Ohio's job-creating machine, small business, running.

Employee Education

Political issues and campaigns can be difficult subjects to discuss in a business environment. As the business owner, you do not want to impose your political views on your employees. However, you may want to offer them the same factual information you found helpful in making your decision on who to vote for or what issue to support. There are many ways to communicate this information. The key is finding the appropriate format that best suits your business and employees. Below are a few suggestions:

INFORMATION WALL

- In your employee break room or common area, set up a bulletin board with political and election-related information.
- Include a calendar of important deadlines and election dates, voter registration information, small business issue information, absentee ballot forms, a list of online resources for more information, polling locations, offices up for election, and information about the candidates.

STAFF MEETING

- Hold a staff meeting with your employees to talk about small-business issues, the election, and the importance of voting. At the meeting, provide your employees with information on registering to vote, absentee ballots, issues, candidates, and important dates.

EMPLOYEE NEWSLETTER

- If you already have an employee newsletter, add a feature highlighting the upcoming election.
- If you do not have a newsletter, now is a great time to start one. It does not have to be elaborate—a one-page sheet with important information on small-business issues and election dates will do.

PAYROLL STUFFERS

- Include reminders regarding voter registration, absentee ballots, and the election in your employees' paychecks as an easy way to remind people to be informed and involved.

GUIDELINES

- DO base all of your information on the facts surrounding an election or issue—not on your personal views.
- DO allow your employees to take personal time off to volunteer with a campaign of their choice or at the polls on Election Day.
- DO share issue-related information from NFIB with your employees (voting records, issue positions, news articles. Find this information online at NFIB.com.)
- DO encourage employees to financially assist the candidate of their choice or a political effort they support.
- DO encourage your employees to register to vote, be informed, stay involved, and vote.

DON'T tell your employees who to vote for.

DON'T give your employees paid time off to volunteer with any campaign. Employees may elect to use vacation time or unpaid leave to do so.

DON'T reimburse employees for their political contributions or require them to make contributions to a political campaign.

DON'T require employees to participate in the political process or single out employees based on their involvement or lack thereof.
